Welcome to the CritLib Unconference!!!!

Library instruction, assessment, cataloging and classification, collection building, staffing, administration, and other functions of academic libraries are all political projects that librarians undertake inside institutions that operate under capitalist, patriarchal, and racist power structures that many of us aim to contest. How do we do this in both theory and practice?

... Red Roses

As we explore these topics together, please keep the following things in mind:

- Whoever shows up are the right people.
- Whatever happens is what is supposed to happen.
- Rule of two feet: if you're not learning/contributing in one space, feel free to get up and find another conversation.

Each session should have a:

- facilitator (who keeps the conversation moving and ensures that everyone has an opportunity to speak)
- note-taker (who takes notes in some format that can be posted to the shared document:
<https://etherpad.wikimedia.org/p/critlibuncon>)

If you're posting notes/photos/thoughts online, please tag with #critlib15!

Key points from the Code of Conduct

Harassment includes offensive verbal comments related to race, ethnicity, sex, gender identity or expression, sexual orientation, country of origin, age, disability, physical appearance, body size, religion, veteran status or other protected class status; discriminatory or offensive images in public spaces; intimidation; stalking; harassing or unwanted photography or recording; sustained disruption of talks or other events; inappropriate physical contact; and unwelcome sexual attention. Participants violating the anti-harassment policy may be warned or asked to leave by unconference organizers.

We see the unconference as a place to share information, not only with other participants, but also with those who may not be able to attend. Sessions are, by default, considered open and can be written about on social media and photographed. If you do not want your picture taken, your words to be recorded or for either photographs or words to be attributed to you, please let other session participants know that. As a courtesy, please always ask prior to creating sound or video recordings of any sessions. Please be thoughtful and respectful with your photographs, recording, and sharing.

If at any point during the unconference you feel uncomfortable or harassed, or if you witness any violations of these policies, please reach out to any of the unconference organizers, who are wearing armbands.

Organizers

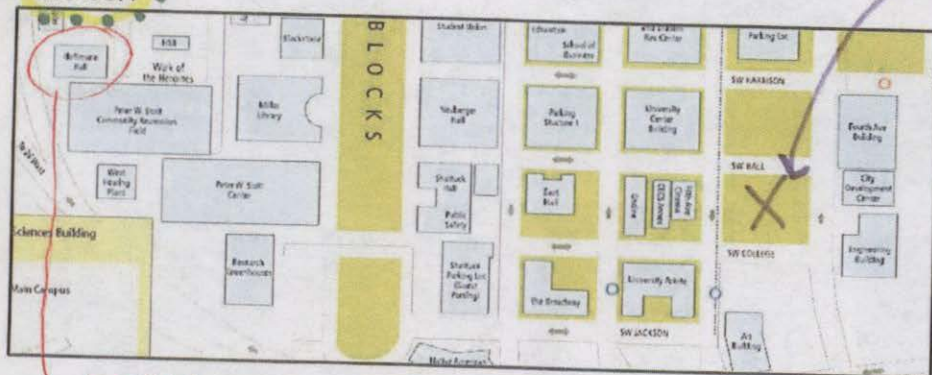

Anne Leonard, Annie Pho, Ann Matsuuchi, Bob Schroeder, Candise Branum, Ian Beilin, Jenna Freedman, Kelly McElroy, Maura Smale, Nicole Pagowsky, and Turner Masland.

Today was made possible thanks to everyone who donated their time and money. Special thanks to Portland State University Library for hosting, to Jennifer Starkey for coffee, to graphic designer Ryan Mason who created our dinosaur friend, and to the McElroys for bingo prizes.
